On the second day of the 3rd National Leadership Conclave of All India Management Association in New Delhi, Suresh Prabhoo, Minister of Railways, Government of India while speaking on the topic 'Driving Indian Economy: Railways as a Growth Engine', talked extensively about how Indian Railways is working towards strengthening the country's economy and how Asia has dominated the world for a long time. "Asia has an ancient culture and growth cannot happen without a deep-rooted culture. Asia is one continent but not one union unlike most other continents. We must segment Asia and see where most of this growth will come from. I am sure India has a great role to play," he said.

and formal education is given a lot of importance, but the problem is that we do not look at skilling people. Therefore, the employability of the students in various industries is very low. In the past years, vocational training has not gone into the definition of skilling. As a country, we have lost a lot of time and we are still slow. Industries pick students according to their requirements and train them to suit their needs, but the government has not been able to provide the training. It became a real challenge for the country, but now with new initiatives, things are changing. We need to create a functional skill system. As a change, if we are able to overlook the formal education system and provide vocational skills to the students, we would be able to increase their employability many times," added Rudy. He was joined by Sanjay Goenka, Conclave Chairman and Chairman, RP-Sanjiv Goenka Group; Sunil Kant Munjal, President, AIMA and Chairman, Hero Corporate Service and Reha Sethi, Director General, AIMA during the session. Development, Information and Broadcasting, Housing and Urban Poverty Alleviation, Government of India, talked about how governance came to prominence only in the 1990s. "On the way to create Asia as a world leader, India and China have a very prominent role to play. The population in Asia, and more specifically the population of our country has to be leveraged for growth. As a country, we will have to focus on wealth creation through ideas, industries, business and agriculture are the pillars of our economy and also our development. Asia is going to be the future for the world's development story and emerge strongly as a world leader in the coming times," said Naidu.

Jayant Sinha, Minister of State for Civil Aviation, Government of India, during his address highlighted the fact that the Indian GDP in PPP is $8 trillion and this contribution is extremely significant. "As our businesses do the good work that they are doing, they must also focus and innovate around affordability to be able to meet the expectations and genuine needs of the Indian consumer," said Sinha.

from its art, society and culture that the world likes. Our culture is so strong that we embrace all while standing on our own feet. But, the soft power has to have the hard power behind to be credible."

This century is said to be the Asian century. The region has given a lot to the world in terms of culture and art. India being an important country in Asia has also contributed significantly with its art forms and culture. The soft power that India has can considerably augment the country's potential to become a leader in the coming times. In an interesting session on 'Plucking the right strings:

elucidated how music always has a positive effect and therefore, the younger generation and the corporate sector also embraces it as is. They iterated that with the soft power of music, India can definitely create its unique position in the world order. The two day conclave witnessed the presence of various ministers from the government, dignitaries from various industries and many other prominent personalities from across sectors. With its insightful deliberations and brain-storming sessions that were attended by a large audience on both days, the conclave successfully evolved as a platform where ideas were exchanged and perspectives were shared across segments.
